

KUMAG-Manifestet

Abstract

The KUMAG Manifest

This article introduces KUMAG, a student-led initiative at the University of Copenhagen dedicated to creating a community for individuals interested in marine archaeology. KUMAG fosters interdisciplinary collaboration, and addresses the pressing need for marine archaeologists in Denmark. The group organizes events, lectures, and field trips and aspires to participate in marine archaeological excavations. KUMAG aims to bridge disciplinary divides and safeguard submerged cultural heritage, emphasizing its importance amid climate change and offshore development. KUMAG encourages museums to consider the group as a valuable resource for marine archaeological work in the future. The group's manifesto calls for accessible training for future marine archaeologists and welcomes contributions and support.

Emilie Bruun Pedersen,
Cora Annamaiya Norling,
Rosa Wernblad,
Fredrik Nyborg
& Oliver Munch Bender

