by Kristian Kristiansen

The future of Nordic TAG?

Every new generation of archaeologists defines its own needs

In 'Arkæologisk Forum' 41, the question was raised by a number of colleagues: will there be a next Nordic TAG (Bech et al. 2019). My answer as to why there have been no Nordic TAG meetings since Copenhagen five years ago is quite simply because no one among the present younger generation felt the urge to organize one. If they increasingly see their identity linked to a larger international theoretical and archaeological community, such as the EAA, then there will probably not be another Nordic TAG.